Other Reports: Tom House:

- House is a representative for Yes for Harrison Kids Committee.
- Non-Homestead property tax proposal failed in August Election for Harrison School.
- 1994 Michigan passed a constitutional amendment titled Proposal A, which changed how schools were funded. See explanation of Proposal A per Wikipedia: "Approved by Michigan voters on March 15, 1994, Proposal A amended the state constitution to reform school finance and property taxation. It replaced a large portion of local school property taxes with a state sales tax increase from 4% to 6% and established a state education property tax of six mills on all property. The reform shifted Michigan from one of the most locally controlled school finance systems to one of the most state-controlled, aiming to reduce disparities in per-student spending."
- In 1995 after the passing of Proposal A, the property tax for homestead property was set at 6 mills and that has remained the same and was set at 18 mills for non-homestead, but must now be renewed at 17.4362 mills.
- The current per-student funding allowance is $10,300. If the non-homestead property proposal fails, that allowance would decrease by 25%.
- If the proposal on November 3, 2026, ballot fails, Harrison Community Schools will lose approximately 5.7 million in operating revenue. These cuts will affect some after-school programs, staffing, supplies, transportation to and from schools and to sporting events, students may be required to pay to play sports, utilities, and will make it difficult to retain and attract good quality teachers.

Reports by County Officials: Clare County Commissioner, Jack Kleinhardt

- Kleinhardt said that since ITC held their information sessions at the Doherty Hotel recently concerning the proposed (Copperton Projects) series of energy infrastructure developments planned for mid-Michigan. Citizens are calling him upset about energy infrastructures coming on their agricultural property or near their homes. Kleinhardt said that residents are asked to give feedback up until November 5. Maps of the proposed high voltage transmission lines and feedback form can be found: Copperton Projects - MI Future Grid
- Kleinhardt said that he is against solar farms on agricultural land. Lots of other property that is not suitable for farmland could be used. He said that solar farm developers love farmland since it is already cleared and leveled.
- Hileman stated that due to eminent domain residents more than likely will not have a say whether the high voltage lines are put on their property or not.
- We are in an information age and need places to store all of this data, but wish they would put data centers where it would not affect drinking water, agricultural areas, and away from residential areas.
